

SOLUTION BRIEF:

Be Ready for the End of Windows 10

In October 2025, Microsoft will end support for its popular Windows 10 operating system, but most businesses are not ready. According to the website statcounter, more than half of the PCs in the U.S. are still running Windows 10. For enterprises, delay in moving to Windows 11 will be costly. Extended support from Microsoft will be available, but it'll cost $61 per machine the first year, $122 for the second, and $244 for the third.

The challenge for IT teams is that many current PCs lack the security features needed to upgrade to Windows 11, so new hardware will be required. All that equipment must be configured and deployed enterprise-wide in time if companies want to avoid paying for extended support. Not doing so would leave them open to security vulnerabilities, but many companies don't have the expertise and scale to plan and deploy large-scale projects smoothly, on time, and on budget.
